Attendance during hearing of appeals.

15. If the Chief Inspector so directs, Inspectors shall attend before the Chief Inspector or the appellate authority, as the case may be, during the hearing of appeals with regard to boilers which they have inspected.

IV.—Instructions for Registration.

Importance of registration.

16. Technical regulations for the registration of boilers and the scale of fees for registration are prescribed in part II of the Regulations. The details of measurement recorded at the time of registration constitute a permanent record for the boiler and determine the original pressure at which the boiler is allowed to work. It is accordingly essential that the work should be done with the greatest care and precision.

Receipt of applications.

17. Applications for registration shall be made under sub-section (1) of section 7 to the Chief Inspector, and shall be accompanied under rule 2 by a receipt for the prescribed fee. No application shall be accepted without the receipt. No boiler shall be registered if on measurement the fee is found to be deficient until the deficit has been paid. Any excess payment will be refunded at the time of registration.

Necessity of avoiding delay.

18. It is essential that no delay should occur in registration. In large towns the measurements under sub-section (3) of section 7 should ordinarily be completed and the reports submitted to the Chief Inspector within ten days of the receipt of the application. In no case should the interval exceed 30 days. The Chief Inspector should issue his orders under sub-section (4) of section 7 without delay.

Register of registered boilers.

19. The Chief Inspector shall maintain a register of registered boilers in serial order in form A in two parts. In part I (boilers originally registered in the Province) the registered number of a boiler shall be the one immediately following the last serial number in the register. Gaps in the series due to the breaking up of boilers or to the transference of boilers to another Province shall not be filled up. In part 2 (boilers originally registered in other Provinces) entries shall be made as prescribed in rule 21.

Procedure on transfer of a boiler.

20. Whenever a boiler is transferred from one Province to another the owner shall under clause (b) of section 6 apply to the Chief Inspector of the Province to which the boiler is transferred for the registration of the transfer; the boiler shall not be used until registration has been effected. The Chief Inspector shall then obtain from that Province the registration book and memorandum of inspection book of the boiler. No fee shall be charged for recording transfers.

Entries of transferred boiler in register.

21. On receipt of the registration book and memorandum of inspection book the Chief Inspector shall enter the boiler under its original number in part 2 of his register; the registration book and the memorandum of inspection book shall be kept in the Chief Inspector's office.

Note of transferred and dismantled boilers.

22. Whenever a boiler has been transferred or broken up the fact shall be noted in the register of the Province from which it has been transferred or in which it has been broken up. In the case of a boiler that has been permanently dismantled the registration book and the memorandum of inspection book shall be destroyed.

V.—Instructions for Inspection.

Reference to previous inspections.

23. Detailed instructions for the inspection of boilers are contained in part II of the Regulations. In making inspections it is important that the Inspector should pay particular attention to entries made in the Memorandum of Inspection Book at the time of the previous inspection.

Procedure during Inspection.

24. In arranging for inspections particular attention should be paid to the provisions of clause (e) of rule 5. The notice required by sub-section (4) of section 8 shall be sent in Form B. If a hydraulic test is necessary in addition to the ordinary inspection ample notice must be given to the owner. During the inspection of one of a battery of boilers, the Inspector should take the opportunity of examining the other boilers under steam, with special reference to the water gauges, pressure gauge and safety valves.

Issue of certificates and provisional orders.

25. In cases in which the Inspector is empowered to issue a certificate under section 8 without further reference, the certificate should ordinarily be issued within 48 hours of the completion of the inspection. Where he proposes to issue a provisional order under section 9 the Inspector should satisfy himself that the boiler is fit to be worked at the maximum pressure and for the period entered in the provisional order. The fact of issue of a provisional order shall be reported immediately to the Chief Inspector.

26. Provisional orders and certificates shall be issued in the forms prescribed by the regulations. In case an original certificate is lost, a duplicate certificate will be issued free of further charges.

27. Fees for inspection shall be calculated on the basis of boiler rating, as prescribed in Regulations 158 and 159. The following fees are prescribed:—

Rupees 40 for boiler rating not exceeding Rs. 100.

" 50 " " "	exceeding Rs. 100 but not exceeding Rs. 300.

" 90 " " "	exceeding Rs. 900 but not exceeding Rs. 1,100.
" 100 " " "	exceeding Rs. 1,100.

VI.—Accidents.

Investigation of accidents.

28. When the Chief Inspector receives any report of accident to a boiler or steam pipe under section 18 he shall forward it at once to an Inspector, who shall with the least possible delay proceed to the place to investigate the accident.

Procedure during enquiry.

29. The Inspector at his enquiry shall make a careful examination of the damaged parts and shall take such measurements and make such sketches for the purpose of his report as he may deem necessary. He shall enquire into the circumstances attending the accident and note the time of its occurrence, its nature and extent, the injury caused to persons and the damage done to property.

Power to hold enquiry in writing.

30. Inspectors are authorized to take the written statements of witnesses and all persons immediately concerned with the accident. In order to comply with the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 18 the Inspector should present to the owner or person in-charge of the boiler a series of written questions on all points that are material to the enquiry.

Use of boiler after accident.

31. The Inspector should decide whether the use of the boiler can be permitted at the same or at a lower pressure without repairs or pending the completion of any repairs or alterations that he may order. In no case should he issue a provisional order or renewal certificate, until his orders have been carried out.

Procedure in case of serious accidents.

32. The report shall be sent without delay to the Chief Inspector. If he considers that the investigation has been sufficient, he shall record the facts in his register of accidents, and enter a brief account of the accident in the registration book, a copy being made in the Memorandum of Inspection Book. If, however, the accident is of a serious nature and in all cases in which an explosion has occurred, the Chief Inspector should after receipt of the Inspector's report proceed to investigate the accident personally or to move the Local Government to appoint a Commission to enquire into the accident. When the Local Government has ordered an enquiry, the report thereof shall be recorded as indicated above.

Commissions of enquiry.

33. Commissions appointed under the preceding rule shall ordinarily consist of the Chief Inspector and one independent person.

34. A brief account of all accidents and their causes should be included in the Chief Inspector's Annual Report.

Reference in annual report.

The petition of appeal shall be accompanied by the original order, notice or report appealed against, or by a certified copy thereof, or where no such order, notice or report has been made in writing by a clear statement of facts appealed against, the grounds of appeal and the relevant section of the Act.

Fixing date for hearing.

39. On receipt of an appeal the Chief Inspector shall, if the appeal is to be heard by himself, at once fix a date for hearing the appeal; and if it is to be heard by the appellate authority; obtain a date for the hearing of the appeal from the President of the Court. It is important that there should be no delay in the decisions of appeals, as the stoppage of a boiler is likely to put the owner thereof to great inconvenience. The decision should ordinarily be given within 10 days from the receipt of the petition of appeal.

Procedure before hearing.

40. When the date of hearing has been fixed, the Chief Inspector shall at once issue a notice to the appellant stating the date of hearing and informing him that if he wishes to be heard in support of the appeal or to produce evidence, he must be present either in person or by authorised agent with his evidence on the date fixed. The notice shall be sent to such address as shall be entered in the petition of appeal.

47. In appeals before the Appellate authority the President is authorised to fix the costs and recover them from the appellant in any case in which the appeal is dismissed; in all cases of appeal in which a local inspection is required by the appellant he shall deposit in advance the full costs of such inspection.

Costs in appeals.

48. Any order on appeal authorizing the registering of a boiler or the grant or renewal of a certificate shall be deemed to be subject to the payment of such fees as are prescribed by rules or Regulations framed under the Act.

PREPARATION FOR EXAMINATION.

See Part II, Chapter I, of the Regulations and Regulation 131.

(a) Preparation for Inspection.

At every inspection of a boiler for the grant or renewal of a certificate, the boiler shall be empty and thoroughly clean in all its parts. All doors of manholes, handholes and sightholes and cleaning plugs and all caps in the headers and mud drums of water tube boilers, all firebars, bearers, front plates, bridge plates, fire-bridges, brick arches, oil fuel burners and mechanical stoker fittings shall be removed. All valves and cocks comprising the boiler mountings shall be opened up and taken apart and the valves or cocks ground, where necessary, before the Inspector's visit.

Provision shall be made for the removal of lagging or brickwork or other concealing part and for the drilling of plates, if required by the Inspector, and for verifying the pressure gauge and safety valve, dimensions and weights. All smoke tubes, smoke boxes, and external flues shall be swept clean.

Provision shall be made for the effective disconnection of all steam and hot water communication with any other boiler under steam as described in Part III of the Regulations. This shall be effected either by the removal of a length of pipe from the steam and feed piping or by the insertion of substantial blank flanges. Where blank flanges are employed, they must be inserted between the flange of the chest and the pipe attached to it. No blank flange shall be inserted between a safety valve chest and the boiler.

Note.—These provisions as to effective disconnection shall extend to every case wherein a person is sent, or with the assent of the owner or person in charge goes, into a boiler for any purpose.

(b) Preparation for Hydraulic Test.

The chests of all mountings subject to steam pressure shall be in place and shut tight or blank flanged. The safety valves should either be jammed down or removed, and the chest opening blank-flanged. The attachment for the Inspector's pressure gauge and the nipple for connecting the Inspector's test pump hose should be in order. The receiving socket shall be fitted with an easily removable cap. In the case of small boilers which cannot be entered by an Inspector and which are hydraulically tested at each inspection a plug hole tapped ⅞ inch British standard Whitworth thread shall be provided in a handy position for the attachment of the Inspector's test pump hose nipple. All doors shall be properly jointed and tightened up. The boiler shall be completely filled with water, care being taken to allow all air to escape and, if possible, a preliminary test not exceeding the working pressure of the boiler should be taken before the Inspector's visit to test the tightness of the joints. When a boiler is hydraulically tested for the first time it shall be entirely cleared of lagging and brickwork; at subsequent tests the lagging or brickwork or portions thereof shall be removed if required by the Inspector.

Preparation Now Required......... .... A B.

Note.—The last certificate of the boiler along with the attendant's certificate of competency should be shown to the Inspector.

APPENDIX A.

GENERAL WORKING OF BOILERS.

Instructions to Boiler Attendants.

These instructions should be frequently and carefully studied, with a view to keeping in mind the precautions to be observed, and the ordinary procedure to be followed in the safe working of boilers.

Precautions before starting the fires.

Before starting the fires in a boiler, the attendant should—

(1) see that there is sufficient water in the boiler and that the gauge cocks are working freely;

(2) ease safety valves, or open cock on top of boiler to allow air to escape;

(3) see that the blow-off cock is fully closed and tight;

(4) see that the safety valves and feed check valve are free and workable;

(5) see that water is not leaking from any part of the boiler.

(6) note if the pressure gauge pointer is at zero;

(7) see that the feed pump is in working order.

He must not rely on the supposition that the water he has previously put in is still in the boiler, as it may have no run out without his knowledge through a leak or open cock, nor can he be sure that the gauge glass shows the true water level until he has tested it. This is done in the following manner: Shut off the lower gauge cock; and empty the drain cock; then shut the drain cock and open the gauge cock; if everything is in order, the water will then rise in the glass to the same height as before.

Raising steam.

In getting up steam in all types of boilers, the operation should be as gradual as circumstances will allow. Nothing turns a new boiler into an old one sooner than getting up steam too quickly. Forcing the fires when starting work is liable to cause straining of the steams and tubes of the boiler. In the case of large boilers generally, steam should not be got up in less than six hours. Before getting up steam, the water level should be observed, to ensure that water is at the proper height in the glass, the pressure gauge noted, and the safety valves tried to see they are free. The blow-off cock should be examined to see that it is completely shut and tight.

Pressure Gauge.—The pressure or steam gauge should be kept in order, and be in such a position as to be easily seen by the boiler attendant. There should be a plain mark on it showing the highest pressure allowed for the boiler, and the dial should be kept clean so that the figures may easily be read.

Steam Pressure.—Ordinarily the safety valve will prevent the steam from rising much above pressure, but if the steam gauge shows so rapid an increase of pressure as to indicate danger of exceeding the highest limit, water should be immediately fed into the boiler and the dampers partially closed in order to diminish the effect of the fire.

If, however, the water has fallen so low that there is danger of an accident from this cause, the fires should be withdrawn before feeding in water, the safety valves eased, and, if the engine is at rest, it should be started so as to reduce the pressure.

The safety valves are provided to guard against over-pressure. They should be moved by hand every day so as to prevent them from sticking. If moved only occasionally, they are liable to leak.

The valve can be tested by slowly raising it a little, and, when let down, it should close perfectly tight. It should never be opened by a sudden knock or pull. If it does not close tight, turn it on its seat until it fits, or when its construction does not permit this, raise it slowly a few times and let it down again, but on no account must the valve be screwed down further or loaded more than what has been allowed by the Inspector.

Safety valves must never be overloaded, and spring valves should have ferrules or other provisions against their being screwed down too far. In case of an accident resulting from wilful overloading the culprit might be held criminally responsible at the official enquiry or inquest.

Low Water Safety Valves.—If there is a low water safety valve, test it occasionally by lowering the water level to see that the valve begins to blow at the right point. It should give warning "before" the water level has sunk too low, and before damage can be done. When the boiler is opened, examine the floats and lever and see that they are free, and that they give the valve the full rise. With the ordinary type of high-steam and low-water safety valve the float should be down at its lowest position and the valve full open when the boiler is empty.

The Water Gauges.—These will be kept best in order by frequently blowing through. The cocks are thus kept in good working condition without leaking. Blow through the drain cock at the bottom of the gauge, and shut and open the steam and water cocks every few hours. These cocks should be blown through more frequently when the water is dirty. Should either of the passages become choked, or whenever the water in the gauge glass moves sluggishly, the passage must be cleaned. This is best done with a wire. The gauge glass is so arranged that its top cock connects with the steam space and its bottom, cock is below the water line. The water line will ordinarily be near the centre of the glass tube. Always test the glass water gauges thoroughly the first thing in the morning, and at the commencement of every shift. This is done by first opening the drain cock, then shutting the upper cock which should give water; the upper cock should then be opened and the bottom cock closed—which should give steam; during this test the drain cock should be kept open.

If water and steam do not appear in proper order, the cocks are choked and the passages should be cleaned. To lessen the risk of breaking the gauge glass the water cock should always be reopened after the steam cock.

Gauge glasses with a narrow white stripe running the whole length of the glass on the side next the boiler are recommended as they show the water line more clearly, especially when the water is dirty.

The Government boiler regulations require every water gauge glass to be fitted with a guard to prevent injury to the attendants. See that it is always in place, and clean when there is steam in the boiler.

Special Note.—It does not follow that there is plenty of water in the boiler because there is plenty of water in the gauge glass. The passages may be choked, and empty gauge glasses are sometimes mistaken for full ones, and explosions have resulted therefrom. Hence the importance of keeping the gauge cocks perfectly tight and clean and of blowing through the test cocks frequently.

A large number of accidents have been due to inoperative water gauges, and to negligence of the attendant is not carefully reading the water level.

The Blow-off Cock.—The blow off should be used daily if the water is at all dirty or sedimentary, especially with locomotive type and vertical boilers, as their narrow water spaces are liable to get choked with mud, which soon hardens into a solid mass. The amount of water to be blown out depends on the size of the boiler and can be determined only from experience. When blowing out the best result is obtained, if the water has been at rest for some time (say, before the engine is started) thus giving the sediment time to settle; if the feed water is clean, merely turn the cock round.

The Steam Cock.—When scum cocks are fitted, if the feed water is dirty, a little should be blown off daily; if the water is clean, merely turn the cock round. Before opening the scum cock see that the water is at the height indicated by the water level pointer, otherwise the scumming will be ineffective. Water should be blown from the surface through the scum cock when steam is being drawn-off, i.e., when the engine or other machinery is working.

Manhole and other door joints.—When making such joints, the jointing material should never be of round-sectioned packing. Care must be taken that the spigot of the door is centrally placed in the hole, as many accidents have resulted from packing being blown out between the spigot and side of hole, even when the clearance was only 1/8 inch. The nuts must be carefully and evenly tightened.

Steam Pipes.—When properly arranged, should give no trouble. Frequently, however, they are so designed as to contain pockets, in which, while out of use, condensed steam accumulates. Such water is exceedingly dangerous and great care should be taken to see that the pipes are properly drained before the stop valve is opened, otherwise "water hammer" will take place even with the best designed steam pipes, and disastrous explosions, causing loss of life and property may occur.

Scale and grease.—Roughly speaking, scale offers a hundred times as much resistance to the passage of heat as does a similar thickness of steal or iron. A half inch furnace plate covered with 1/10th inch scale is as efficient a heat retarder as a steel furnace 10 inches thick. Grease is about ten times worse than scale. In a boiler at work the temperature of a clean furnace plate is only slightly in excess of that of the water in the boiler; but if scale or grease is interposed between the water and the plate, the latter acquires a temperature more nearly approximating that of the flame with which it is in contact. If the fire is fierce (artificial draught) the furnace tube may grow so hot that it elongates considerably. If in addition, cold air is admitted during each firing, a concertina action of the furnace takes place, which is one of the worst causes of boiler wear and tear. Wear and tear can be reduced and the life of a boiler prolonged if scale and grease are prevented from accumulating in a boiler. The combined effect of scale or grease and artificial draught are disastrous. Scale or grease also causes waste of fuel.

Grease.—A mixture of sedimentary water, soda and grease produces an adhesive scum. Where this is suspected, the water level should never be lowered below the furnace top, unless the boiler is afterwards entered and this scum cleaned of the furnace plate before firing again.

Scale Removal.—The customary method is not a satisfactory one. The boiler is emptied and then cooled down by opening all the manholes, and the result is that the scale, which would otherwise be soft, hardens through contact with the air, and requires laborious chipping off.

A very effective, but slower method, is to retain the water in the boiler until cool, and not to run it out until the men are ready to enter the boiler with water hose, brushes and scrapers. The scale will then be soft and easily removable. If time is a consideration, the cooling can be accelerated by adding cold feed to the hot water in the boiler and slowly running off the cooled water. Another method is to blow off the boiler with the lowest possible pressure (not more than 20 lbs.) and to keep it closed until cold. The scale will then be easily removed.

Treatment of feed water.—Many feed waters require soda or other chemical to arrest corrosion or to change the nature of the scale. There is no harmless chemical which will remove scale or sediment when it has once got into the boiler, and the only effective process is to purify the feed water before it enters the boiler. By this mean the sediment, and generally, too, the added chemical, can be deposited in tanks or in filters, and therefore never goes into the boiler. Excepting when the water obtainable is very good water-purifying apparatus ought to pay any boiler owner, particularly at those works where three or more boilers are in constant work. Boiler owners wishing to have definite advice as to the best treatment of their feed water should have it analysed at some chemical laboratory and ascertain the best treatment in the particular circumstances.

Special attention is drawn to the not infrequent but very bad practice of allowing the waste steam from the engine cylinders or pumps to be drained into the boiler feed water tanks. The waste steam from cylinders is always mixed with a certain amount of oily matter, which will be deposited in the feed water tanks and ultimately be pumped into the boiler, with possibly disastrous results, as it will be obvious to every careful boiler attendant that should the oil be deposited on the furnace crowns, they may become overheated and collapse.

It should be the first care of the boiler owner, and the boiler attendant to see that the feed water is kept as pure as possible. Impure feed water means additional expense on the upkeep of the boiler.

Preservation of boilers when not in use.—Steam boilers when not in use are liable to deterioration from corrosion, and, unless well cared for the made rust proof, they may depreciate more rapidly than when in use. They should be thoroughly drained and thoroughly dried, and all valves, cocks and openings closed so as to exclude moisture. Another plan is to fill the boiler with water to which about 1/100 per cent. caustic soda has been added.

Special Instruction for Boiler No.______.

This boiler should be opened up and thoroughly cleaned after a period of work which should not exceed______________ A record of such cleanings should be maintained and produced when required by the Inspector.

RESOLUTION.

The 13th October 1923.

No. 23860.—On the recommendations of the Deputy Commissioner, Miánwáli, and the Commissioner, Ráwalpindi Division, the Governor in Council has decided to establish a Provident Fund in the interests of the clerical establishment, employed in connection with the working of the Public Works Fund called the "Canal Clearance Fund" in the Miánwáli District. The rules under which this Provident Fund will, for the present, be conducted are attached to this resolution and subscriptions to the fund should first be made on pays becoming due on the 1st October 1923:—

RULES.

1. In the following rules—

(1) "Pay" means monthly pay as defined in Fundamental Rule 9 (21) (a).

(2) "Servant" includes every non-pensionable employee holding a substantive office in connection with and paid from the Canal Clearance Fund.

(3) "Depositor" means a servant on whose behalf a deposit is made under these rules.

(4) "Interest" means the interest which is paid on a deposit at a Government Savings Bank under the rules in force for such institutions.

2. Every servant, appointed or promoted by the District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund on or after the date from which these rules come into effect in the Canal Clearance Fund, to an office of which the pay is not less than Rs. 20, shall be required to subscribe at the rate of 6¼ per cent. or one anna in the rupee, on his pay, to a Provident Fund, of which an account will be opened at the Post Office Savings Bank. A servant, appointed or promoted previous to the coming into effect of these rules to an office of which the pay is not less than Rs. 20, may be permitted by the District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund to subscribe to the Provident Fund. The deduction shall be made upon every pay bill presented, and shall be credited at once to the Fund. In making this deduction fractions of a rupee of pay should be omitted.

3. A contribution shall be made from the Canal Clearance Fund to the deposit account of each depositor, equal to one half of the amount of the deduction made from his pay under the preceding rule. Such contribution shall be credited to the provident fund, month by month, in favour of such servant, together with the deduction from his pay. The contribution will be charged in the Canal Clearance Fund accounts to head "3—Contributions on account of Provident Fund of employees."

4. The sums credited monthly under rules 2 and 3 to the Provident Fund Ledger maintained by the District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund, shall be paid duly into the Post Office Savings Bank. Such payments should, whenever possible, be made into the Bank between the 1st and 4th of each month, in order that interest may accrue.

5. The deposits and contributions, with interest thereon, at the credit of any servant, may be withdrawn—

(1) on the decease of the depositor, when the amount shall be paid to his legal heirs;

(2) on his ceasing to be employed in connection with the Canal Clearance Fund, either by resignation or by his services being dispensed with, or by transfer to service under some other Local Fund, or to Government service, when the amount shall be paid to the servant himself, except in the case of transfer to service under a Local fund for which a provident fund has been constituted, when the amount shall be transferred to the credit of the servant with that provident fund.

A subscriber resigning his appointment before 10 years' service, except on account of illness or other necessary cause, shall be entitled to only one-half of the contributions made on his behalf by the District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund with interest thereon. A subscriber retiring before 5 year's service shall be entitled to none of the contributions made on his behalf. In the case of subscribers who have served under more than one local body, the period of service for the purpose of the rule shall be counted as the combined continuous service under those local bodies. The District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund shall determine what is a "necessary cause."

6. If a servant is dismissed, the District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund may, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, withhold all or any part of the contribution allotted to him with the interest accrued thereon, and pay to the servant only the balance at his credit with such contribution and the interest thereon. In the case of there being any outstandings against a servant who may have resigned or been dismissed, the District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund may deduct the amount of such outstandings from his deposit and pay him the balance only after such deduction.

7. Any contribution and interest thereon withheld from a dismissed servant shall belong to the Canal Clearance Fund.

8. A separate account, in Form A, appended, shall be kept and written up in the office of the District Officer administering the Canal Clearance Fund on account of every depositor, and a copy of this account, which shall show every payment credited, with the interest thereon, shall be furnished to every depositor, as soon as possible after the close of the financial year to which the account relates.

9. Amounts credited or debited to the Provident Fund shall, on the same day, be posted into the Provident Fund Ledger, in Form B, appended in full detail. The figures for column 8 of the ledger must be calculated monthly, and the net balance of each account entered in columns 5 and 9, but the figures in these columns can be proved only once a year with the Savings Bank Pass Book. Great care should, therefore, be taken to make the monthly calculation according to the rule in force in the Post Office. The Provident Fund Ledger shall have separate pages for each month's transactions.

10. No voluntary deposits from servants will be credited to the Provident Fund.

11. Servants are not eligible to subscribe to the Provident Fund while absent on leave other than leave on average pay.

12. On a depositor leaving the service, his account shall be closed and unless the amount at his credit be withdrawn within a certain period, viz.—

for balances of Rs. 10 and under, one year ;

for balances over Rs. 10, three years ;

it shall be written off as a dead account, and repaid only under the orders of the Commissioner of the Division.

13. When accounts become "dead" they must be removed from the Provident Fund Ledger, and be credited in the cash-book as a miscellaneous receipt, the money being drawn out of the Savings Bank. On an amount being thus written off it should be entered in a "dead account" register, in which subsequent repayment shall be noted in order to avoid a double payment.

PRESS COMMUNIQUÉ.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL has heard, with the greatest regret, the news of the death of Mr. A. F. Horton, Superintendent of Police, Hoshiarpur, and six members of his force, as a result of injuries received in the execution of their duty when carrying out the arrest of a dangerous criminal.

The Punjab Government have lost in Mr. Horton a valuable and promising officer. By the self-sacrifice displayed in the zealous discharge of their duties, Mr. Horton and his men have added another page to the already proud history of the Punjab Police Force; and His Excellency the Governor feels confident that the standard of duty which they have set will remain as an inspiring example to all members of the force.

His Excellency the Viceroy personally, and the Government of India officially, have both expressed to His Excellency the Governor their desire to be associated with the Punjab Government in their public recognition of the loss which the Police Force has sustained. His Excellency the Governor is glad therefore to take this opportunity, not only on behalf of his own Government but also on behalf of the Government of India, of publicly acknowledging the value of the services rendered to the Province by those who have laid down their lives in the execution of their duty, and also of offering sincere sympathy to those relatives and others most closely affected by these untimely deaths.

RESOLUTION.

THE REMOVAL OF ILLITERACY.

THE Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) has on more than one occasion in the past few years given expression to a definite opinion that the most pressing educational need of the province at this stage is the removal of illiteracy from among the masses. This need has influenced its policy in the matter of the expansion and improvement of primary education; and the determination of means and methods by which this great end may be more rapidly achieved has been engaging its constant and most earnest attention. The matter is of urgent and vital importance from many aspects; and especially at the present juncture when the decision has been made to reach self-government by successive stages. A persistent continuance of illiteracy among the masses is obviously antagonistic to political as well as to other advancement. It is clear that a solution of the problem is not to be found merely in the extension of educational facilities for boys. Experience has proved that, by this method operating alone, the removal of illiteracy is but a slow and tedious process. It is necessary also to recognise both the obligation of educating the illiterate adult and also the need for awakening among the illiterate population a living and intelligent interest in their environment and in the matters which pertain to their welfare and advancement.

I.—IMPROVEMENTS IN THE PRIMARY SYSTEM OF EDUCATION.

Increased enrolment and its problems.

2. So far as the education of boys is concerned, very marked progress has been made during the last few years by an increased enrolment in schools. About 70,000 additional pupils were added in 1921-22; and about 150,000 in 1922-23. Past experience, however, has indicated many distressing facts. Very many pupils do not proceed beyond the first class, the figures for 1921-22 recording as many as 225,510 pupils in the first class, but only 91,245 in the second, 69,280 in the third, and 50,496 in the fourth class. It is obvious that a considerable proportion of these boys gain but little benefit by their schooling. If the real test of educational progress is the reduction of illiteracy, then the largely increased enrolment can only be regarded as contributing towards that progress when the number of pupils in the fourth class approximates more closely to that in the first. Again, there are other pupils who, though they remain longer and progress further at school, yet never attain literacy. And, what is even more disheartening, there are even others who, on completion of the primary course, may be termed literate, but soon relapse into illiteracy after leaving school.

Improvements in the primary system.

3. The Minister is most gratified by the remarkable increase in the enrolment and by the effective co-operation of local bodies, parents and the general public, but he is most keenly anxious to check the persistence of the unfortunate defects to which reference has just been made. He is convinced that the pivot of progress in the primary system is an improvement of the teacher, both in quality and in suitability, and he desires therefore that the policy which has already been framed to effect this improvement should be both maintained and developed.

(a) Increased and improved facilities for the training of teachers.

4. In the matter of the training of vernacular teachers, the Punjab has done much to maintain its already high position among the provinces of India. It is estimated that more than 70 per cent. of the teachers in vernacular schools maintained by Government and by local bodies are trained. The number of students under training has been increased from 1,076 in 1916-17 to 2,230 in 1922-23, while little difficulty is experienced at present in securing the necessary supply of suitable recruits. The percentage of students under training who are drawn from the agricultural classes has risen from 42 per cent. of the total number in 1921-22 to 55 per cent. in the current year; and the training courses have been revised with the object of bringing them into closer touch with conditions under which the students will teach in village schools. Considerable improvements have also been made in the conditions of service for vernacular teachers. In the matter of training, the following observations are offered :—

(a) The percentage of trained teachers varies very considerably between the several districts. This may be due to the location of the normal schools, the students finding it inconvenient to go far afield for their training. To meet this difficulty a departure has recently been made. Junior vernacular training classes are now attached temporarily to the Government high schools at Mianwali, Montgomery, Dharamsala and Hissar, these being districts which have had difficulty in the past in maintaining an adequate proportion of trained teachers. It may be found desirable to extend this practice by the temporary attachment of training classes to the Government high schools in those districts which find it difficult to keep pace with the increased requirements for trained teachers. By this means the needs of backward districts will not be overlooked.

(b) The successful efforts which have been made to attract a larger proportion of students from the agriculturist classes to the normal schools should be continued. Efficiency depends much upon the adaptability of a teacher to his environment and upon his sympathy with the pupils.

(c) It has often been urged that many of the present teachers are of insufficient age to command the confidence of parents and pupils. Attention is therefore drawn to the necessity of a strict observance of the age limit regulating admission to normal schools.

(d) Particular attention should be paid to the urgency of sending untrained teachers for training. Moreover, it is generally regarded as desirable that candidates for training should have had some preliminary teaching experience. Provided, therefore, that the untrained teacher is not retained for too long a period before he is sent to his training course, there is considerable benefit to be derived by the students in having had this experience. Untrained teachers should not ordinarily be given independent charge of a school.

(b) Improved conditions of service for teachers.

5. Closely allied with the expansion and improvement of the training system is the urgency of improved conditions of service. Local bodies, during the last few years, have been revising their rates of salary for teachers with the result that a junior vernacular teacher starts his career in many districts on an initial salary of Rs. 25 per mensem and in the remaining districts on Rs. 20 per mensem; in all cases, with the prospect of small annual increments. A senior vernacular teacher may hope to receive employment on a salary of about Rs 35 per mensem, with the customary annual increments, up to Rs. 70 or even more. There is, however, a grave danger lest these enhanced salaries may fail to compensate for the frequency of transfer. It is therefore advisable that inspectors should obtain quarterly returns of transfers so that they may be in a position (if necessary) to correct this abuse.

(c) The substitution of two-teacher for one-teacher schools.

6. Another fruitful measure of improvement lies in the substitution of two-teacher for one-teacher schools. Attention has often been directed to the weakness of the one-teacher school and to the burden imposed on the teacher of being responsible unaided for the teaching of four classes. In accordance with the conditions laid down in the Education Department Circular No. 2507-A., dated 19th February 1923, more than 1,300 additional teachers have been employed by district boards; and thus the number of one-teacher schools has been materially reduced. Provided that steps are taken, from time to time, to recruit the additional teachers required to cope with the increased enrolment, the expansion in the number of pupils should be a means of increased efficiency through the rapid elimination of the one-teacher school. The Minister is of opinion, therefore, that the provision of adequate staffs, in existing schools, is of even greater urgency than the creation of new schools unless, in the latter, a reasonable number of pupils is assured.

(d) Completion of the primary course by all pupils essential.

7. Steps should also be taken, both by exhortation and by improved teaching, to ensure that as far as possible, all the pupils shall complete at least the primary course. It is satisfactory to note from several district reports that much is already being done to effect an improvement in this matter. Perhaps one of the most interesting steps in this direction is the scheme initiated by the Co-operative Department in organising societies of parents who bind themselves to send their children to school for the full primary course and to pay a penalty for default. The main benefit of all forms of compulsion is probably the assurance that those who come to school shall remain there a sufficiently long time to gain a lasting benefit by their schooling. Progress in this direction is indicated by the recent returns which show that as many as eight municipalities and 127 school areas in rural districts have already introduced compulsion under the Act. In future, credit should be due to the measure of success achieved in the promotion of literacy rather than to a mere increase in enrolment.

(e) A satisfactory proportion of middle schools is needed.

8. The Minister has also observed with some anxiety the fact that, in certain districts, the number of lower middle schools has actually been reduced. He desires to emphasise yet again that a school of six classes is immeasurably better, both in efficiency and economy, than the four-class primary school; for it is in the fifth and sixth classes that the pupil usually acquires a firm and a permanent grasp of literacy.

9. It is hoped, therefore, that the increased enrolment, together with the other measures to which allusion has been made, will result in a material reduction of illiteracy among the rural classes of the province. Unless, however, other steps are taken, progress towards the ultimate end in view must inevitably be slow. It is necessary, therefore, also to make provision whereby the pupil shall retain literacy once gained and thus be in a position to use that instrument for beneficial purposes; and, further, it has to be recognised that the large and illiterate adult population of the province has an unanswerable claim on the assistance of Government.

II.—SCHOOLS FOR ADULTS.

Importance of the education of adults.

10. The urgency of the problem relating to the education of the illiterate adult can hardly be overstated. The decision to achieve constitutional progress by successive stages imposes a very definite obligation to take all possible steps towards its solution. The general spread of literacy amongst parents should also lead to the universal education of the children; and, moreover, should serve to remove the suspicion among the cultivating classes that literacy is incompatible with the vocation of agriculture. There is, therefore, reason to believe that if schools for adults can be successfully instituted and made generally popular, the intellectual development of the province will be assured.

Satisfactory beginnings.

11. A very satisfactory beginning has been made, during the past year, in the provision of schools for adults. It is estimated that, on March 31st last, as many as 18,000 adults were enrolled in these schools. For this happy achievement the inspecting and teaching staffs, local bodies and the Co-operative Department are mainly responsible. It is pleasing to learn that, in spite of waning enthusiasm in a limited number of instances, this movement has been attended by an encouraging measure of success, many teachers having rendered devoted service in an honorary capacity and much support having been forthcoming from the public. What is perhaps even more pleasing is the enthusiasm and, in many cases, the remarkable capacity shown by the pupils. It is reported that those pupils who show competence and enthusiasm attain literacy after six months' tuition.

12. The Punjab Government (Ministry of Education) is now anxious that these schools should be placed on a more permanent basis; and, for this purpose, the following general suggestions are offered :—

A permanent system required.

(a) School terms and sessions.—The aim should be to give recruits a clear six months' work in order that, at the end of that period, they should be either literate or on the high road towards it. There should be two terms, one for the winter and the other for the summer. The winter term might suitably begin in the month of October or November as the autumn crops should by then have been reaped. As this season gives the best opportunity for concentrated work, the pupils would be expected to attend school during this term for two hours daily on six days in the week. During the summer term (excluding vacation) the school might be open on (say) two days in the week when the pupils who have attained literacy or nearly so should read and work under the general guidance of the teachers. The actual time of instruction should be fixed with reference to the convenience of the pupils. These terms and sessions will probably be found suitable to both urban and rural conditions. What has been suggested in this sub-paragraph, however, should not be read as imposing rigid lines of procedure, for both experiment and variety of treatment are desirable in the early stages. It is probable that the final form will be evolved from results attained in the several types of school rather than through departmental regulations.

(b) Methods of teaching.—It is clear that adult pupils will progress at different rates; far more so than in the case for boys. When once the rudimentary ground work has been covered, the teaching should be largely individual. Nothing, for example, would be more deadening and uninspiring than for a class of adults to be taught the first reader when half the class is ready for the second. In arithmetic, again, after the pupils have grasped the elementary rules, the same principle should be observed. Lessons inviting the application of principles should form an important feature of this teaching. Though the recognised syllabus should be confined to the three R's, the pupils should be encouraged to present their difficulties to the teacher who should suggest further means of study. Thus, each pupil should be allowed to progress at his own rate and bent, the teacher's main duty being that of supervision and of encouragement.

(c) Literacy certificates.—In the Multan Division, an attempt has been made during the past year through the agency of the inspecting staff to award literacy certificates to adults who have reached an approved standard. About 200 such certificates were awarded last year. This practice has been found to make a serious inroad on the time of the inspecting staff; and, moreover, it presents other difficulties, it being by no means easy to establish a uniform standard of literacy. Still, the practice is undoubtedly sound in principle and is commended for general consideration, and for adoption wherever possible.

(d) Readers.—Readers which are intended for boys are not suitable for adults. Special readers will therefore be prepared which will include, from the earliest possible stage, material which should be both interesting and useful to adult readers.

(e) Admission of boy pupils.—Boys under the age of sixteen should only be admitted in very exceptional cases. A school for adults is not intended to be a cramming place for boys attending a day school; nor as the ordinary means of education for boys who should be at a day school.

(f) The use of school buildings.—Subject to the requirements of the school for its work in the day time, school buildings should be made available to a school for adults; and the building of a school receiving Government grant should be regarded as a public building for this purpose. The library, under the rules framed for the purpose, should also be available to selected adult pupils. Particular care should be exercised to ensure that the adult pupils are cleanly in their habits. Those who are not so should be removed from the roll.

(g) Fees.—It would be unwise, in the first instance, to impose any hard and fast rules in regard to fees but, on the principle that what is paid for is the better appreciated, some monetary or other contribution towards the cost of maintaining the school should be expected from the pupils. The method of levying this contribution should be determined by the authorities concerned. It is also hoped that the financial assistance which has already been received from private benefactors will be continued in the future.

The training of suitable teachers essential.

13. A school for adults should be an integral part of every training institution, including the Central Training College. By this means the students under training will have additional facilities in the practice of teaching; the cost will be negligible; and, especially at the Central Training College, the training authorities will have direct opportunities of studying the important problem of adult education. In view of the fact that success in adult education will be in proportion to the capacity of the teacher to attract pupils to school and to secure and maintain their interest when they have joined the school, the means and methods of teaching adults should form a special feature of the course of instruction to all teachers under training. It cannot be too strongly emphasised from the outset that the teaching of adults can only end in failure if it lapses into a feeble, uninspiring and rigid imitation of the methods employed in the teaching of children.

Classes for adults in high and normal schools.

14. In Government institutions in which a school for adults is started, an addition will be made to the allotment for contingencies in order to cover the expenditure incurred. The general supervision of the arrangements for an adult school would appropriately form part of the duties of the superintendent of the boarding house. In certain schools the practice already obtains whereby the boys in the boarding house prepare their home lessons in the class rooms of the school under the guidance of the superintendent. This practice should be followed in all cases, but there would still be ample accommodation in another part of the builidng and remote from the boys' classes, which would be more than sufficient for the classes for adults. As, however, these two activities would be in progress at the same time and in the same building, the general supervision of both by the superintendent of the boarding house should not present difficulties. Suitable precautions should be taken to keep these two activities entirely separate.

15. In training institutions the teaching will be done by the students under training under the supervision of suitably qualified members of the staff. In other Government institutions the teaching will be conducted by a member or members of the staff. With suitable organisation the teaching work of the school for adults should not impose any serious addition to the work of each teacher. With the concurrence of the inspector, the work in the classes for adults might be taken into calculation in determining the number of teaching periods demanded of these teachers during the day; and this will probably prove to be the usual practice. In exceptional cases, an allowance might be permitted, but such allowance should not exceed Rs. 60 per annum. Similar arrangements will probably be appropriate to schools for adults maintained by aided secondary schools. The work of the staffs in such schools would be reviewed by the inspector in accordance with the principle laid down above. A small charge for contingencies would be admissible in such schools as approved expenditure for the purpose of assessing the maximum grant.

And in municipal schools.

16. It is expected, therefore, that the schools for adults which will form part of Government high schools and training institutions, added to those conducted in connexion with secondary schools maintained by private bodies, in accordance with the suggestions offered in the preceding paragraph, will meet, in a considerable measure, the immediate needs of urban areas and of rural areas in which such schools are situated. Anglo-vernacular middle schools maintained by municipalities, being now aided institutions under the terms of paragraph 11 of the Education Department C. M. No. 6374-G., dated 18th April 1922, will receive the same encouragement as has been suggested for privately managed schools in the preceding paragraph. There may be certain towns however (especially those in which compulsion is enforced) where it may be necessary to supplement the provision made in secondary schools. With the approval of the inspector, special schools or classes for adults may be maintained by a municipality; but Government grants on the expenditure of such schools or classes will be limited to Rs. 1,000 for each division. Expenditure on this account will therefore be admissible as approved expenditure for Government grants (up to the limit named above) in the statement submitted annually for the expansion and improvement of vernacular education in municipal areas.

Adult classes in rural areas.

17. A more difficult and more urgent problem to decide, however, is the means whereby schools for adults can best be encouraged by district boards in rural areas. Practice varies at present. Some district boards employ their own day teachers to maintain these schools which, for purposes of grant, are regarded as aided schools; and co-operative societies often employ as teachers persons who are not engaged in teaching during the day. The Minister is of opinion, provided that no payment is made or grant awarded in respect to a school whose average attendance is below fifteen, that the best means of assisting district boards in the enterprise will be to permit expenditure on schools for adults to be regarded as legitimate expenditure for the assessment of Government grants for the expansion and improvement of vernacular education, up to the total maximum named for that purpose for each year. The Minister, moreover, regards this form of education as of such urgent importance that he has decided, for the present, to ear-mark a portion of the additional grant allotted each year for this purpose. Among the objects enumerated in paragraph 22 of the Education Department's C. M. No. 336-A. S., dated 29th June, 1922, therefore, will now be added the approved expenditure on schools for adults, subject to the following limits:—

(a) In respect to schools for adults maintained by district boards, the allowance should not exceed Rs. 60 per annum for each teacher. This allowance should be graded in accordance with the qualifications and duties of each teacher. This sum of Rs. 60 should be regarded as a maximum and not as the fixed remuneration for a teacher. A small expenditure on contingencies will also be regarded as approved expenditure.

(b) In respect to schools for adults which are aided by district boards, the rule above will also apply in regard to the remuneration of the teacher. An additional grant may be paid either towards contingencies or in the form of a block grant. Such a block grant might be based either on the award of literacy certificates or on the average attendance. The maximum permissible shall not in any case exceed the amount of a block grant calculated at the rate of Rs. 2 per annum for each adult receiving a literacy certificate, or Re. 1 per annum for each adult in average attendance.

(c) The conditions in (a) and (b) above will be applicable to schools for adults in villages where primary schools already exist. In villages where such schools do not exist, the Co-operative Department will be encouraged to institute adult schools by grants awarded under special rules of a more elastic nature in order to meet the special circumstances of these villages. In this matter, the Minister is of opinion that it is undesirable to impose restrictions which would in any way hamper the success of the experiment. For these schools, therefore, block grants will be payable on the scale prescribed in (b) above, but the grant on account of the salary of the teacher will be admissible on a sliding scale, based upon the average attendance (provided that it is not less than fifteen) and that the total grant does not exceed Rs. 200 per annum on account of the school or schools taught by a single teacher. An allotment will be placed at the disposal of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, for this purpose. A report should be submitted each year on the distribution of the allotment and on the results of the experiment; the general question of adult education should also be discussed in this report in the light of the experience gained.

III.—THE DISSEMINATION OF KNOWLEDGE AMONG THE ILLITERATE.

Means of dissemination.

18. In addition to the creation of adult schools, steps should also be taken to supplement by indirect means the teaching given in those schools. There is an urgent necessity for the institution of small village libraries which might be housed in the schools. It is probable that useful pamphlets will be presented by certain departments of Government and by philanthropic societies such as the Red Cross Society. The latter society has already provided a ready means for the expansion of this movement by a donation of Rs. 30,000. The bulk of this money will be spent on the purchase of magic lanterns which are now being ordered. A small sum will also be set apart from this donation to meet the necessary contingencies. It is suggested that the lantern might most conveniently be kept in the local Government high school where the science teacher would be held responsible for its safe custody; and where the hall of the school would be suitable for the display of the slides. The lectures, both at head-quarters and in the district, would be connected with matters of public interest and would be graduated in accordance with the competence of the audience. It is intended to prepare slides on suitable topics, and also lecture notes for the guidance of the lecturers.

19. It is also essential that those who remain illiterate should not be forgotten. Various methods of widening their horizon and stimulating their intelligence readily suggest themselves. Illustrations and pictures dealing with matters of interest and importance should be made readily available to them. Some of the lectures and discussions, especially if they are capable of illustration by means of a magic lantern, would also appeal to that section of the community. In rural areas, much could be done by this means to bring to the knowledge of the uninformed the most important developments in agricultural and hygienic science; in the breeding and care of cattle; in the methods of combating and preventing common ailments and diseases; in the value of co-operation; and in the elementary principles of civics and administration. The main object in this, as in all measures for the education of adults, should be to afford to those who have not been favoured with opportunities to benefit by the advantages of education in their younger days the means whereby they may learn through the eye and ear that which will enable them to become better and more useful citizens. It is hoped that the services of Government pensioners and other public-spirited persons may be utilised in carrying out many of the proposals discussed in this Resolution.

Formation of District Committees.

20. It is probable that a district committee will be essential to the proper organisation and success of this work. Such committees would naturally include the officials most nearly concerned and also a number of non-official men and women who are interested in the movement.

ORDER.—Ordered that the Resolution be printed in the Punjab Government Gazette, English and Urdu editions, and communicated to the Press. Also that copies be forwarded to the Divisional Commissioners; Deputy Commissioners; all Divisional, District and Assistant District Inspectors of Schools; the Inspector of Training Institutions; the Chief Inspectress of Schools; the Inspector of Vernacular Education; the Principals of the Central Training College and Multan College; the Head-masters and Principals of Government High and Normal Schools; the Registrar, Co-operative Credit Societies, and the Director of Public Health, for information.

By order of the Punjab Government (Ministry of Education).

The 3rd December 1923.

No. 28362-B.—In exercise of the powers conferred by rule 37 (e) of the Devolution Rules, the Finance Department of the Government of the Punjab has framed the following rules and is pleased to direct that they be included in the Punjab Budget Manual (No. 3 of the Punjab Financial Handbooks), as under—

Add to clause (c) of paragraph 16·20.—In these cases it is generally convenient to obtain the previous approval of the Finance Department by means of an unofficial reference. The official order should then be issued in the Administrative Department, but must be communicated to the Accountant-General by the Finance Department in order to show that the particular reappropriation has its approval. The Administrative Department should accordingly see that the endorsement to the Accountant-General in any such case issues from the Finance Department.

Add as a new paragraph 16·21.—When any reappropriation involves expenditure in England a letter informing the High Commissioner of the change in his estimates is issued by the Finance Department at the time of consenting to the reappropriation if this is necessary, otherwise on the matter being brought to its notice by the Administrative Department.

Add as a new paragraph 16·22.—An excess over a contract grant has in the first place to be dealt with in the manner laid down in paragraph 16·12 et seq. for 'Applications for additional appropriations' and this is to be done by the Disbursing Officer by the 15th January at latest if he has reasons to believe that the expenditure chargeable to contract contingencies has actually exceeded or is exceeding the amount of the grant. Any excess appropriation granted must be included in the list of excesses over and surrenders from modified grants—see Chapter 10—, and in order to carry out the provisions of rule 10·6 Heads of Departments should keep special record of contract grants.

Excesses over contract grants have however another aspect. They involve a breach of an agreement with Government by which account rules are relaxed on condition that expenditure is not to exceed a certain amount. Therefore apart from the question of appropriation, excesses over a contract grant require the attention of Heads of Departments from a disciplinary point of view, and each Head of Department should as soon as the accounts for the year are closed consider whether excesses over contract grants are justified and take action accordingly. Excesses in the grant of a Head of Department will be dealt with by the Local Government in the Administrative Department in consultation with the Finance Department. The Accountant-General will report to each Head of Department any case in which the allotment under a contract grant has been exceeded.

Secretary to Government, Punjab,

Advice to be given to owners.

12. At the time of inspection Inspectors should advise the owner and the person in-charge of the boiler on the management and up-keep of the boiler with special reference to the amount of cleaning required in view of the quality of water used and should also impress upon them the usefulness of the instructions issued by the Chief Inspector.

Specific duties.

Attendance during hearing of appeals.

15. If the Chief Inspector so directs, Inspectors shall attend before the Chief Inspector or the appellate authority, as the case may be, during the hearing of appeals with regard to boilers which they have inspected.

IV.—Instructions for Registration.

Importance of registration.

16. Technical regulations for the registration of boilers and the scale of fees for registration are prescribed in part II of the Regulations. The details of measurement recorded at the time of registration constitute a permanent record for the boiler and determine the original pressure at which the boiler is allowed to work. It is accordingly essential that the work should be done with the greatest care and precision.

Receipt of applications.

7. Applications for registration shall be made under sub-section (1) of section 7 to the Chief Inspector, and shall be accompanied under rule 2 by a receipt for the prescribed fee. No application shall be accepted without the receipt. No boiler shall be registered if on measurement the fee is found to be deficient until the deficit has been paid. Any excess payment will be refunded at the time of registration.

Necessity of avoiding delay.

18. It is essential that no delay should occur in registration. In large towns the measurements under sub-section (3) of section 7 should ordinarily be completed and the reports submited to the Chief Inspector within ten days of the receipt of the application. In no case should the interval exceed 30 days. The Chief Inspector should issue his orders under sub-section (4) of section 7 without delay.

Register of registered boilers.

19. The Chief Inspector shall maintain a register of registered boilers in serial order in form A in two parts. In part I (boilers originally registered in the Province) the registered number of a boiler shall be the one immediately following the last serial number in the register. Gaps in the series due to the breaking up of boilers or to the transference of boilers to another Province shall not be filled up. In part 2 (boilers originally registered in other Provinces) entries shall be made as prescribed in rule 21.

Procedure on transfer of a boiler.

20. Whenever a boiler is transferred from one Province to another the owner shall under clause (b) of section 6 apply to the Chief Inspector of the Province to which the boiler is transferred for the registration of the transfer ; the boiler shall not be used until registration has been effected. The Chief Inspector shall then obtain from that Province the registration book and memorandum of inspection book of the boiler. No fee shall be charged for recording transfers.

Entries of transferred boiler in register.

21. On receipt of the registration book and memorandum of inspection book the Chief Inspector shall enter the boiler under its original number in part 2 of his register ; the registration book and the memorandum of inspection book shall be kept in the Chief Inspector's office.

Note of transferred and dismantled boilers.

22. Whenever a boiler has been transferred or broken up the fact shall be noted in the register of the Province from which it has been transferred or in which it has been broken up. In the case of a boiler that has been permanently dismantled the registration book and the memorandum of inspection book shall be destroyed.

V.—Instructions for Inspection.

23. Detailed instructions for the inspection of boilers are contained in part II of the Regulations. In making inspections it is important that the Inspector should pay particular attention to entries made in the Memorandum of Inspection Book at the time of the previous inspection.

Reference to previous inspection.

24. In arranging for inspections particular attention should be paid to the provisions of clause (e) of rule 5. The notice required by sub-section (4) of section 8 shall be sent in Form B. If a hydraulic test is necessary in addition to the ordinary inspection ample notice must be given to the owner. During the inspection of one of a battery of boilers, the Inspector should take the opportunity of examining the other boilers under steam, with special reference to the water gauges, pressure gauge and saftey valves.

Procedure during Inspection.

25. In case in which the Inspector is empowered to issue a certificate under section 8 without further reference, the certificate should ordinarily be issued within 48 hours of the completion of the inspection. Where he proposes to issue a provisional order under section 9 the Inspector should satisfy himself that the boiler is fit to be worked at the maximum pressure and for the period entered in the provisional order. The fact of issue of a provisional order shall be reported immediately to the Chief Inspector.

Issue of certificates and provisional orders.

26. Provisional orders and certificates shall be issued in the forms prescribed by the regulations. In case an original certificate is lost, a duplicate certificate will be issued free of further charges.

27. Fees for inspection shall be calculated on the basis of boiler rating, as prescribed in Regulations 158 and 159. The following fees are prescribed:—

Rupees 40 for boiler rating not exceeding 100.

„ 50 „ „ „ exceeding 100 but not exceeding 300.

„ 60 „ „ „ exceeding 300 but not exceeding 500.

„ 70 „ „ „ exceeding 500 but not exceeding 700.

„ 80 „ „ „ exceeding 700 but not exceeding 900.

„ 90 „ „ „ exceeding 900 but not exceeding 1,100.

„ 100 „ „ „ exceeding 1,100.

VI.—Accidents.

28. When the Chief Inspector receives any report of accident to a boiler or steam pipe under section 18 he shall forward it at once to an Inspector, who shall with the least possible delay proceed to the place to investigate the accident.

Investigation of accidents.

29. The Inspector at his enquiry shall make a careful examination of the damaged parts and shall take such measurements and make such sketches for the purpose of his report as he may deem necessary. He shall enquire into the circumstances attending the accident and note the time of its occurrence, its nature and extent, the injury caused to persons and the damage done to property.

Procedure during enquiry.

30. Inspectors are authorized to take the written statements of witnesses and all persons immediately concerned with the accident. In order to comply with the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 18 the Inspector should present to the owner or person in-charge of the boiler a series of written questions on all points that are material to the enquiry.

Power to hold enquiry in writing.

31. The Inspector should decide whether the use of the boiler can be permitted at the same or at a lower pressure without repairs or pending the completion of any repairs or alterations that he may order. In no case should he issue a provisional order or renewal certificate, until his orders have been carried out.

Use of boiler after accident.

32. The report shall be sent without delay to the Chief Inspector. If he considers that the investigation has been sufficient, he shall record the facts in his register of accidents, and enter a brief account of the accident in the registration book, a copy being made in the Memorandum of Inspection Book. If, however, the accident is of a serious nature and in all cases in which an explosion has occurred, the Chief Inspector should after receipt of the Inspector's report proceed to investigate the accident personally or to move the Local Government to appoint a Commission to enquire into the accident. When the Local Government has ordered an enquiry, the report thereof shall be recorded as indicated above.

Procedure in case of serious accidents.

33. Commissions appointed under the preceding rule shall ordinarily consist of the Chief Inspector and one independent person.

Commissions of enquiry.

Reference in annual report.

34. A brief account of all accidents and their causes should be included in the Chief Inspector's Annual Report.

35. If in the course of an inspection, or at any other time, the Inspector discovers damage which comes within the definition of an accident, but which has not been reported, he shall report the facts at once to the Chief Inspector for action under clause (d) of section 24.

VII.—Appeals.

Filing of appeal.

36. Every petition of appeal shall be made in writing either in English or in the vernacular, and should, under Article 11 of Schedule II of the Court Fees Act, 1870, as amended by the Court Fees (Punjab Amendment) Act, 1922, bear a Re. 1 Stamp.

Presentation of appeal.

37. An appeal may be presented either personally or by registered post to the Chief Inspector.

Form of appeal.

38. The petition of appeal shall be accompanied by the original order, notice or report appealed against, or by a certified copy thereof, or, where no such order, notice or report has been made in writing, by a clear statement of facts appealed against, the grounds of appeal and the relevant section of the Act.

Fixing date for hearing.

39. On receipt of an appeal the Chief Inspector shall, if the appeal is to be heard by himself, at once fix a date for hearing the appeal ; and, if it is to be heard by the appellate authority, obtain a date for the hearing of the appeal from the President of the Court. It is important that there should be no delay in the decisions of appeals, as the stoppage of a boiler is likely to put the owner thereof to great inconvenience. The decision should ordinarily be given within 10 days from the receipt of the petition of appeal.

Procedure before hearing.

40. When the date of hearing has been fixed, the Chief Inspector shall at once issue a notice to the appellant stating the date of hearing and informing him that if he wishes to be heard in support of the appeal or to produce evidence, he must be present either in person or by authorised agent with his evidence on the date fixed. The notice shall be ent to such address as shall be entered in the petition of appeal.

Presence of Inspector.

41. In all appeals the Chief Inspector shall decide whether the presence of the Inspector is necessary, and shall issue orders accordingly.

Attendance of witnesses.

42. The appellate authority shall have power to secure the attendance of witnesses and to make local enquiries under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure.

PREPARATION FOR EXAMINATION.

See Part II, Chapter I of the Regulations and Regulation 131.

(a) Preparation for Inspection.

At every inspection of a boiler for the grant or renewal of a certificate, the boiler shall be empty and thoroughly clean in all its parts. All doors of manholes, handholes and sightholes and cleaning plugs and all caps in the headers and mud drums of water tube boilers, all firebars, bearers, front plates, bridge plates, fire-bridges, brick arches, oil fuel burners and mechancial stoker fittings shall be removed. All valves and cocks comprising the boiler mountings shall be opened up and taken apart and the valves or cocks ground, where necessary, before the Inspector's visit.

Provision shall be made for the removal of lagging or brickwork or other concealing part and for the drilling of plates, if required by the Inspector, and for verifying the pressure gauge and safety valve, dimensions and weights. All smoke tubes, smoke boxes, and external flues shall be swept clean.

Provision shall be made for the effective disconnection of all steam and hot water communication with any other boiler under steam as described in Part III of the Regulations. This shall be effected either by the removal of a length of pipe from the steam and feed piping or by the insertion of substantial blank flanges. Where blank flanges are employed, they must be inserted between the flange of the chest and the pipe attached to it. No blank flange shall be inserted between a safety valve chest and the boiler.

Note.—These provisions as to effective disconnection shall extend to every case wherein a person is sent, or with the assent of the owner or person in charge goes, into a boiler for any purpose.

(b) Preparation for Hydraulic Test.

The chests of all mountings subject to steam pressure shall be in place and shut tight or blank flanged. The safety valves should either be jammed down or removed, and the chest opening blank flanged. The attachment for the Inspector's pressure gauge and the nipple for connecting the Inspector's test pump hose should be in order. The receiving socket shall be fitted with an easily removable cap. In the case of small boilers which cannot be entered by an Inspector and which are hydraulically tested at each inspection a plug hole tapped ½ inch British standard Whitworth thread shall be provided in a handy position for the attachment of the Inspector's test pump hose nipple. All doors shall be properly jointed and tightened up. The boiler shall be completely filled with water, care being taken to allow all air to escape and, if possible, a preliminary test not exceeding the working pressure of the boiler should be taken before the Inspector's visit to test the tightness of the joints. When a boiler is hydraulically tested for the first time it shall be entirely cleared of lagging and brickwork; at subsequent tests the lagging or brickwork or portions thereof shall be removed if required by the Inspector.

Preparation Now Required......... .. .. A B.

Note.—The last certificate of the boiler along with the attendant's certificate of competency should be shown to the Inspector.

APPENDIX A.

GENERAL WORKING OF BOILERS.

Instructions to Boiler Attendants.

These instructions should be frequently and carefully studied, with a view to keeping in mind the precautions to be observed, and the ordinary procedure to be followed in the safe working of boilers.

Precautions before starting the fires.

Before starting the fires in the boiler, the attendant should—

(1) see that there is sufficient water in the boiler and that the gauge cocks are working freely;

(2) ease safety valves, or open cock on top of boiler to allow air to escape;

(3) see that the blow-off cock is fully closed and tight;

(4) see that the safety valves and feed check valve are free and workable;

(5) see that the water is not leaking from any part of the boiler.

(6) note if the pressure gauge pointer is at zero;

(7) see that the feed pump is in working order.

He must not rely on the supposition that the water he has previously put in is still in the boiler, as it may have now run out without his knowledge through a leak or open cock, nor can he be sure that the gauge glass shows the true water level until he has tested it. This is done in the following manner: Shut off the lower gauge cock, and empty the drain cock; then shut the drain cock and open the gauge cock; if everything is in order, the water will then rise in the glass to the same height as before.

Raising steam.

In getting up steam in all types of boilers, the operation should be as gradual as circumstances will allow. Nothing turns a new boiler into an old one sooner than getting up steam too quickly. Forcing the fires when starting work is liable to cause straining of the steams and tubes of the boiler. In the case of large boilers generally, steam should not be got up in less than six hours. Before getting up steam, the water level should be observed, to ensure that water is at the proper height in the glass, the pressure gauge noted, and the safety valves tried to see they are free. The blow-off cock should be examined to see that it is completely shut and tight.

Pressure Gauge.—The pressure or steam gauge should be kept in order, and be in such a position as to be easily seen by the boiler attendant. There should be a plain mark on it showing the highest pressure allowed for the boiler, and the dial should be kept clean so that the figures may easily be read.

Steam Pressure.—Ordinarily the safety valve will prevent the steam from rising much above pressure, but if the steam gauge shows so rapid an increase of pressure as to indicate danger of exceeding the highest limit, water should be immediately fed into the boiler and the dampers partially closed in order to diminish the effect of the fire.

If, however, the water has fallen so low that there is danger of an accident from this cause, the fires should be withdrawn before feeding in water, the safety valves eased, and, if the engine is at rest, it should be started so as to reduce the pressure.

The safety valves are provided to guard against over-pressure. They should be moved by hand every day so as to prevent them from sticking. If moved only occasionally they are liable to leak.

The valve can be tested by slowly raising it a little, and, when let down, it should close perfectly tight. It should never be opened by a sudden knock or pull. If it does not close tight, turn it on its seat until it fits, or, when its construction does not permit this, raise it slowly a few times and let it down again, but on no account must the valve be screwed down further or loaded more than what has been allowed by the Inspector.

Safety valves must never be overloaded, and spring valves should have ferrules or other provisions against their being screwed down too far. In case of an accident resulting from wilful overloading the culprit might be held criminally responsible at the official enquiry or inquest.

Low Water Safety Valves.—If there is a low water safety valve, test it occasionally by lowering the water level to see that the valve begins to blow at the right point. It should give warning "before" the water level has sunk too low, and before damage can be done. When the boiler is opened, examine the floats and lever and see that they are free, and that they give the valve the full rise. With the ordinary type of high-steam and low water safety valve the float should be down at its lowest position and the valve full open when the boiler is empty.

The Water Gauges.—These will be kept best in order by frequently blowing through. The cocks are thus kept in good working condition without leaking. Blow through the drain cock at the bottom of the gauge, and shut and open the steam and water cocks every few hours. These cocks should be blown through more frequently when the water is dirty. Should either of the passages become choked, or whenever the water in the gauge glass moves sluggishly the passage must be cleaned. This is best done with a wire. The gauge glass is so arranged that its top cock connects with the steam space and its bottom cock is below the water line. The water line will ordinarily be near the centre of the glass tube. Always test the glass water gauges thoroughly the first thing in the morning and at the commencement of every shift. This is done by first opening the drain cock, then shutting the upper cock which should give water; the upper cock should then be opened and the bottom cock closed—which should give steam; during this test the drain cock should be kept open.

If water and steam do not appear in proper order, the cocks are choked and the passages should be cleaned. To lessen the risk of breaking the gauge glass the water cock should always be reopened after the steam cock.

Gauge glasses with a narrow white stripe running the whole length of the glass on the side next the boiler are recommended as they show the water line more clearly, especially when the water is dirty.

The Government boiler regulations require every water gauge glass to be fitted with a guard to prevent injury to the attendants. See that it is always in place, and clean when there is steam in the boiler.

Special Note.—It does not follow that there is plenty of water in the boiler because there is plenty of water in the gauge glass. The passages may be choked, and empty gauge glasses are sometimes mistaken for full ones, and explosions have resulted therefrom. Hence importance of keeping the gauge cocks perfectly tight and clean and of blowing through the test cocks frequently.

A large number of accidents have been due to inoperative water gauges, and to negligence of the attendant in not carefully reading the water level.

The blow-off cock.—The blow-off should be used daily if the water is at all dirty or sedimentary, especially with locomotive type and vertical boilers, as their narrow water spaces are liable to get choked with mud, which soon hardens into a solid mass. The amount of water to be blown out depends on the size of the boiler and can be determined only from experience. When blowing out the best result is obtained, if the water has been at rest for some time (say, before the engine is started) thus giving the sediment time to settle; if the feed water is clean, merely turn the cock round.

The Steam Cock.—When scum cocks are fitted, if the feed water is dirty, a little should be blown off daily; if the water is clean, merely turn the cock round. Before opening the scum cock see that the water is at the height indicated by the water level pointer, otherwise the scumming will be ineffective. Water should be blown from the surface through the scum cock when steam is being drawn-off, i.e., when the engine or other machinery is working.

Manhole and other door joints.—When making such joints, the jointing material should never be of round sectioned packing. Care must be taken that the spigot of the door is centrally placed in the hole, as many accidents have resulted from packing being blown out between the spigot and side of hole, even when the clearance was only 1/8 inch. The nut must be carefully and evenly tightened.

Steam Pipes.—When properly arranged, should give no trouble. Frequently, however, they are so designed as to contain pockets, in which, while out of use, condensed steam accumulates. Such water is exceedingly dangerous and great care should be taken to see that the pipes are properly drained before the stop valve is opened, otherwise "water hammer" will take place even with the best designed steam pipes, and disastrous explosions, causing loss of life and property, may occur.

Scale and grease—Roughly speaking, scale offers a hundred times as such resistance to the passage of heat as does a similar thickness of steal or iron. A half inch furnace plate covered with 1/10th inch scale is as efficient a heat retarder as a steel furnace 10 inches thick. Grease is about ten times worse than scale. In a boiler at work the temperature of a clean furnace plate is only slightly in excess of that of the water in the boiler; but if scale or grease is interposed between the water and the plate, the latter acquires a temperature more nearly approximating that of the flame with which it is in contact. If the fire is fierce (artificial draught) the furnace tube may grow so hot that it elongates considerably. If, in addition, cold air is admitted during each firing, a concertina action of the furnace takes place, which is one of the worst causes of boiler wear and tear. Wear and tear can be reduced and the life of a boiler prolonged if scale and grease are prevented from accumulating in a boiler. The combined effect of scale or grease and artificial draught are disastrous. Scale or grease also causes waste of fuel.

Grease.—A mixture of sedimentary water, soda and grease produces an adhesive scum. Where this is suspected, the water level should never be lowered below the furnace top, unless the boiler is afterwards entered and this scum cleaned off the furnace plate before firing again.

Scale Removal.—The customary method is not a satisfactory one. The boiler is emptied and then cooled down by opening all the manholes, and the result is that the scale, which would otherwise be soft, hardens through contact with the air, and requires laborious chipping off.

A very effective, but slower method, is to retain the water in the boiler until cool, and not to run it out until the men are ready to enter the boiler with water hose, brushes and scrapers. The scale will then be soft and easily removable. If time is a consideration, the cooling can be accelerated by adding cold feed to the hot water in the boiler and slowly running off the cooled water. Another method is to blow off the boiler with the lowest possible pressure (not more than 20 lbs.) and to keep it closed until cold. The scale will then be easily removed.

Treatment of feed water.—Many feed waters require soda or other chemical to arrest corrosion or to change the nature of the scale. There is no harmless chemical which will remove scale or sediment when it has once got into the boiler, and the only effective process is to purify the feed water before it enters the boiler. By this mean the sediment, and generally, too, the added chemical, can be deposited in tanks or in filters, and therefore never goes into the boiler. Excepting when the water obtainable is very good water-purifying apparatus ought to pay any boiler owner, particularly at those works where three or more boilers are in constant work. Boiler owners wishing to have definite advice as to the best treatment of their feed water should have it analysed at some chemical laboratory and ascertain the best treatment in the particular circumstances.

Special attention is drawn to the not infrequent but very bad practice of allowing the waste steam from the engine cylinders or pumps to be drained into the boiler feed water tanks. The waste steam from cylinders is always mixed with a certain amount of oily matter, which will be deposited in the feed water tanks and ultimately be pumped into the boiler, with possibly disastrous results, as it will be obvious to every careful boiler attendant that should the oil be deposited on the furnace crowns, they may become overheated and collapse.

It should be the first care of the boiler owner and the boiler attendant to see that the feed water is kept as pure as possible. Impure feed water means additional expense on the upkeep of the boiler.

Preservation of boilers when not in use.—Steam boilers when not in use are liable to deterioration from corrosion, and, unless well cared for and made rust proof, they may depreciate more rapidly than when in use. They should be thoroughly drained and thoroughly dried, and all valves, cocks and openings closed so as to exclude moisture. Another plan is to fill the boiler with water to which about 1/100 per cent. caustic soda has been added.

Special Instruction for Boiler No.________.

This boiler should be opened up and thoroughly cleaned after a period of work which should not exceed ________________________ A record of such cleanings should be maintained and produced when required by the Inspector.

COMMITTEES.

The 15th August 1923.

No. 2671-S.—The following note on the Reconstitution of the Municipal Committees and District Boards of the Punjab with explanatory statistics is published :—

NOTE.

THE Government of India, in a Resolution No. 41 (Education—Municipalities), dated 16th May 1918, laid down principles for observance with a view to the development of local self-Government in India ; and action had, in certain directions, been taken in the Punjab in accordance with these principles before the introduction of the Reforms. The constitution of local bodies has continued to receive the attention of the present Government, and the object of this note is to explain very briefly the present situation as brought about by alterations introduced since the commencement of the reformed scheme of Government.

Municipalities in the Punjab on 1st January 1921.

2. On 1st January 1921, there were altogether 101 municipal committees in the Punjab, of which 79 were based, in varying degrees, on a system of election ; the remaining 22 consisting entirely of nominated members. Of the 79 committees with an elective element, 38 were based on communal electorates, and the remaining 41 on mixed or general electorates with open voting.

Alterations made in the pre-reform municipal constitutions.

3. The alterations most urgently called for in the existing municipal constitutions were considered to be :—

(a) the adoption of some fixed principle for determining the total number of members in each of the various municipal committees. As matters stood, a municipality with a given population would have a committee consisting of, say, 10 members, and another in the same district, with a larger population would have a committee of, say, only 8 members. On the whole, the numerical strength of municipal committees needed to be increased rather than diminished in order to provide for the representation of the various interests concerned ;

(b) the introduction of a system of election in most of the 22 nominated municipalities ;

(c) the increase of the elected element in the 79 committees where it already existed ;

(d) a general reduction of the official element in all the 101 municipalities.

As to (a) the reform has been effected with due regard to the population as modified by factors such as the existing constitution and the variety of the interests to be represented.

Ordinarily, however, municipal committees with a population of 5,000 or less have been given a large number of members per 1,000 than municipalities with a population of over 5,000. On the whole the strength of all the municipal committees has been increased as much as was possible without making them unwieldy.

As to (b) the principle of election has been introduced, or its introduction has been ordered in 17 out of the 22 nominated committees, leaving only 5 as they were before. Further, 2 new committees (Narowal and Abohar) have been created, both with an elected element, bringing the total number of municipal committees to 103. Thus, under the orders now in process of enforcement, only 5 committees out of 103 will be without an elected element.

As to (c) the elected element has ordinarily been increased to 75 per cent. of the total, and in some cases even to 85 per cent. In only 8 out of the 98 municipal committees in which the elective system has been introduced or ordered to be introduced is the elected element less than 75 per cent.

As to (d) the official element in municipal committees has been reduced as much as possible. It is now very small and largely consists of educationists and medical men.

Why was it necessary to reconstitute the municipal committees, and on what principle has the reconstitution been effected.

4. Before 1921 a municipal committee was constituted or reconstituted, from time to time, as occasion required, when some one moved in the matter of that particular municipality. The wholesale revision of constitutions made necessary by the reforms indicated in the foregoing paragraph,—that is to say, by the increase in the total number of members in most committees, by the introduction of election in committees where it did not exist before, and by the increase in the number of elected members in committees that were already based to some extent on election—accentuated the necessity of formulating some fixed principle of general application for the distribution of the elected seats on municipal committees among the various communities. The problem was to discover a formula which should graft the democratic principle of the Reforms on the concrete facts of municipal administration in the Punjab. The formula adopted was that "the elected seats on municipal committees should be distributed among the communities in proportion to their population as modified arithmetically by their voting strength."

In some municipalities, where communal representation did not prevail, it was noticed that the wards were so constituted as to place a community with a large majority of voters in the position of a minority whenever elections ran on communal lines. In order to avert this evil, care was taken in such municipalities to see how the wards are constituted, and an attempt made to demarcate the wards in such manner as not to place any community at a disadvantage.

The principle of communal representation in municipalities.

5. It has already been mentioned that in January 1921 the constitution of 38 municipalities was based on communal electorates. At the very commencement of the general reconstitution Government laid it down that communal electorates should not be newly introduced in any municipality except with a view to remove communal friction, or to satisfy a keen local demand on the part of an aggrieved community. In accordance with this principle communal electorates are being allowed in 11 other municipalities, and of these 11 the reconstitution of 8 with communal electorates had already been taken in hand before 1921.

It is thus contemplated that out of 98 municipalities in which the system of election prevails, there will be 49 with communal electorates.

General results.

6. As a result of the reconstitution effected or proposed to be effected in the 49 municipal committees with communal electorates, 8 committees will have an equal number of Muslim elected member as against the other elected members; 13 committees will have preponderance of Muslim elected members; and the remaining 28 committees will have a preponderance of elected members other than Muslims.

Alterations made in the pre-reform district boards constitutions.

7. On 1st January 1921 there were, exclusive of Simla, twenty-eight district boards altogether in the Punjab. Seventeen boards out of these were based, in some degree, on a system of election while the remaining 11 had only nominated members. The constitutions of these boards were held to call for the following improvements :—

(a) the introduction of the system of election in the 11 nominated boards ;

(b) the increase of the elected element in the 17 boards where it already existed ;

(c) the reduction of the official element in all the 28 boards ;

(d) the revision of the franchise, which was not uniform throughout the Punjab, and in some cases was open to serious objection, e. g., in Lyallpur, where lambardars only had the vote.

Results of the reconstitution.

8. As a result of the reconsititution of the boards on the above lines, the extisting elected element was in 16 out of the 17 elected district boards raised to 75 per cent., and in one to 66 per cent. Further, in the 11 district boards that were purely nominated, 8 have been given a 66 per cent. and 3 a 33 per cent. elected element. Six is the maximum number of officials that can now be nominated on any one of the 28 district boards.

Basis of electoral circles for district boards.

9. All these 28 district boards are without exception, being reconstituted on a territorial basis, but Government have directed that, subject to the convenience of voters and the maintenance of zail boundaries, an effort should be made so to constitute circles as not to give a particular community preponderance in a larger number of circles than what would be due to that community on the combined basis of its population and voting strength. In practice, however, it has not been found possible to carry out this principle in any satisfactory manner.

The principle of communal representation in district boards.

10. The Hindus in some districts where they were in a minority, e. g., Amritsar, Multan, Jhang Muzaffargarh and Dera Ghazi Khan, pressed for communal representation. This was also done for the same reason by the Muslims of Amritsar, Jullundur Ferozepore, Gurdáspur, Gujránwála, Ambála and Hissar. Government have, for the present, decided not to introduce communal representation in any district board, but to watch the results of the next elections.

Notified areas and small towns.

11. The committees of notified areas are entirely nominated. As practically all notified areas are to be converted into small towns, their constitutions have not been touched. The general principles for the constitution of small town committees are still under consideration.

The principle on which Government nominate members on local boards.

12. Finally, it is necessary to explain the principles on which Government exercise their power of nominating non-officials on local bodies As a rule only such non-officials are nominated whose presence on a committee or board is desirable in the public interest: Government accept, however, the principle that in municipalities where communal representation prevails, nominations should not ordinarily be so made as to disturb the balance of the elected seats apportioned to the various communities. Where communal representation does not prevails and it is not possible to arrange for the due representation of a minority by other means, the balance may to some extent be redressed by a limited use of the power of nomination.

The statistical tables.

13. The statistical tables that follow will, it is hoped, prove useful in illustration of this note :

Table I.—The population figures are based on the Census of 1921. The voters' figures were submitted by the local officers when the reconstitution was taken in hand.

Table II—gives the distribution of members in municipal committees before they were reconstituted ; the figures were practically the same on the 1st of January 1921.

Table III—gives the seats due to the principal communities on the basis of (a) population, (b) voting strength, and (c) the average of population and voting strength.

Table IV—gives the proposals of Government based on the last four columns of table III. The table shows the cases in which the proposals have already been sanctioned. In this table the distribution by communities is given only against those municipalities where the communal system prevails.

Table V.—The population figures are based on the Census of 1921. The voters' figures were submitted by the local officers when the reconstitution was taken in hand.

Table VI—gives the distribution of members in district boards before they were reconstituted ; the figures were practically the same on the 1st of January 1921.

Table VII—is self-explanatory. The communal system has not been introduced in to any district board.

Table VIII—gives the seats that would fall to the share of the principal communities in each district board on the basis of (a) population, (b) voting strength, and (c) the average of population and voting strength.

They will come into force six weeks from the date of publication of the notification :—

RULES.

I. The municipal committee shall appoint from time to time one or more places as public vaccine stations for the municipality at such a place or (places) as the Sub-Assistant Surgeon may, in consultation with the committee, approve, and shall similarly fix the days and hours at which such stations (or every such) will be opened, and shall cause to be affixed on the outside of such a place (or places in a conspicuous position a sign board on which shall be printed in letters easily legible in English and Urdu characters the following inscription :—

SHAHABAD MUNICIPAL VACCINE STATION.

Open every day from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M.

And these stations (when more than one) shall be numbered as No. 1, No. 2, No. 3 etc., respectively.

II. For every public vaccine station one public vaccinator shall be appointed by the committee and every such public vaccinator shall wear a distinguishing badge consisting of a red cross on a white ground, and this shall be worn on the breast.

2241 PGG

IV. The appointment, suspension and dismissal of every public vaccinator and Superintendent of Vaccination employed within the limits of the municipality shall rest with the municipal committee and subject, in case of those who are entitled to pension from Provincial revenues, to the approval of the Sanitary Commissioner, Punjab.

V. The vaccination season will commence from the 1st of November and will end on the 31st of March.

Note for vaccinator.—Although the Vaccination Act does not render liable to punishment the omission to get children under the age of 6 months vaccinated, yet it is very desirable that children should be vaccinated at an earlier age. As a rule all healthy unprotected children over one month old presented for vaccination should be vaccinated by the public vaccinator.

VI. During the vaccination season the public vaccinator shall be bound to attend all the vaccine stations to which he may be attached by the Sub-Assistant Surgeon on the days and hours fixed for such station.

VII. The lymph to be used in the performance of vaccination shall be that supplied by the Punjab Vaccine Institute.

VIII. The vaccinator shall perform house to house vaccination during the time fixed by the committee. He shall daily prepare a list of the names of the children to be vaccinated next day and the parents or the guardians of the children shall be informed of the fact according to this list as well as of the time at which the vaccinator shall vaccinate the child. Any person desiring his child to be vaccinated at his house shall intimate the fact to the public vaccinator who shall arrange with the applicant to vaccinate the child after the time fixed by the committee for the purpose, and in such case a fee of eight annas shall be payable by such person to the vaccinator who vaccinates a child elsewhere than in the circle for which such vaccinator is appointed.

IX. Persons licensed by the Commissioner to act as private vaccinators shall in no case demand a higher fee than eight annas for a single operation, and shall perform their duties under the orders and subject to the general control of the Sub-Assistant Surgeon.

X. If the result of first vaccination is a failure the child should be re-vaccinated, if the second operation is also a failure a third attempt should be made. If this is also unsuccessful it is needless to repeat it again.

XI. Whenever it is ascertained that a child is unfit for vaccination or is insusceptible of successful vaccination a certificate in Form A, attached to these rules, shall be granted, in the former case, to the parent or guardian of such child by the vaccinator and in the latter in Form B by the Sub-Assistant Surgeon. In like manner whenever it is ascertained that a child has been successfully vaccinated a certificate shall be granted by the vaccinator to the parent or guardian of such child in Form C attached to these rules.

XII. The following registers shall be kept up by the municipal committee :—

(a) A register showing the names of children born within the local area subject to these rules on and after the date of application of Act XIII of 1880 to such area.

(b) A register showing the names of unprotected children born in the area aforesaid previous to the date of application of Act XIII of 1880 and who were at that date under the age of fourteen years, if boys, and of eight years, if girls.

(c) A register showing the names of unprotected boys and girls, respectively, under these ages brought within the local area aforesaid at any time after the application of Act XIII of 1880 and who had resided there for a month.

(d) A register showing the result of each vaccination or its postponement and the delivery of certificates, if any.

XIII. The preparation of register (a) shall be affected from the register of births maintained in the Municipal Office; of registers (b) and (c) from the information to be collected under the orders of the Secretary of the Municipal Committee; of register (d) from the reports submitted by the vaccinator as hereinafter prescribed.
